Stripped of Titles, Income, Edward VIII Retires to Private Life

YORK SUCCEEDS AS KING IN ORDER FOR BROTHER TO MARRY

Britain Launched On A New Regime, Pledged to Conservatism, Simplicity

BILL RUSHED THROUGH

Under No Compulsion To Go Into Exile; Has Promised To Leave, However

By David Sentner
L. N. S. Staff Correspondent

LONDON, Dec. 11.—Striped titles of nobility, and his income from the royal estates, Edward VIII receded into private life as David Windsor today, and his brother, the Duke of York, succeeded him as King of England and Emperor of India.

In proceedings that lasted for less than four hours from start to conclusion, Edward's abdication to enable his marriage to Mrs. Wallis Simpson, of Baltimore, became final, binding and irrevocable, and Britain was launched on a new regime, pledged to conservatism, simplicity and respect for the tradition of centuries.

Edward ceased to be King at 1.52 p. m. (8.52 a. m. E. S. T.) when the clerks of Parliament announced the royal assent had been given to the abdication bill that had been rushed through three readings in the House of Commons without division, and passed by the House of Lords in six minutes.

Two minutes earlier, the signatures that ended Edward's brief, uncrowned reign had been scratched on a page of parchment by the three members of

Bensalem Seniors To Present Annual Play

CORNWELLS HEIGHTS, Dec. 11.—Tonight the seniors of Bensalem Township High School present their annual senior class play, "The Green Ghost." With more than a month of intensive training for the production the 12 seniors who have parts in the play should give an excellent presentation of the 3-act mystery.

Those who have parts in the play include: Ah Lee, Chinese butler, Robert Lange, Dora Van West, an ex-show girl, Helen Edelmans, Reggie Van West, her cousin, Austen Larson, Mrs. Parker, another cousin, Helen Zelinsky, Janice Parker, her young daughter, Ruth Falconer, Carol Parker, Janice's older sister, Margaret Brown, Caroline Van West, head of the family, Charlotte Tulloch, Magnolia, her colored maid, Marcella Foster, Dr. Barr, her physician, Walter Fortnum, Eric Van West, her nephew, Bruce MacKenzie, Lieutenant Craig, of the police, Charles Abbott, Detective Sergeant Fitz, his assistant, Douglas Gittens.

The scene takes place in an old-fashioned home owned by a stern old maid, Miss Caroline Van West. She calls her relatives together. Her 6 relatives come to her home to help her make her will before she dies and leaves the famous pearls, which have been in the family for a hundred years. The pearls are stolen, and suspicion falls, in turn, upon every one. The mystery, however, is finally solved, and with the happy ending the play is an entertaining unit.

"RAILROADS OF '36" IS SUBJECT, CLUB SESSION

Geo. W. Curtis Tells Rotarians of the Improvements in Service

STEP-UP THE SCHEDULES

"Railroads of 1936" was the subject of George W. Curtis, representative of the Pennsylvania Railroad, who addressed Bristol Rotary Club members yesterday at the luncheon meeting in the Elks' home. Presiding at the noon meeting was Dr. H. Doyle Webb.

Mr. Curtis enumerated the improvements on the line he represents, telling of the building of the gigantic new stations in Philadelphia and Newark, the latter to be opened in March of 1937. This station will eliminate both Manhattan Transfer and Park Place. The reason for the erection of stations of such size as the two mentioned, according to the speaker, is to care for peak loads on holidays, and special occasions such as football games, political conventions, prize-fights, etc.; and also with a view to traffic in future years.

Improvements in the cars were noted, with the P. R. R. owning 3,000 of the 9,000 air-conditioned cars in the country. All newer cars have indirect lighting, stated Mr. Curtis, and the stainless steel trains' modernistic trend in furnishings was mentioned.

Speaking of changes in engines which pull the trains of today, the railroad man told that the company which employs him prefers electric power. The newer steam engines are stream-lined; but a great many of the trains are drawn by Diesel motors. The new electric locomotives were mentioned as selling at four for one million dollars. The Pennsylvania Railroad owns 60 such.

Improvements to trackage was gone over, and the Rotarians were told that passenger schedules have been quickened 25 per cent. Freight schedules have been stepped up 40 per cent in time service, it was told, with door-to-door delivery now being a feature. The local men were informed that railroads of the United States employed 950,000 people in the depth of the depression, with that number being increased today to 1,100,000.

SEVEN FLEE FROM EARLY MORNING HOUSE BLAZE

House at Wycombe is Entirely Gutted and Contents Destroyed

HOT STOVE IS CAUSE

WYCOMBE, Dec. 11.—Seven people fled from their home during the early morning today when fire gutted the house in which two families resided on the Forrest Road.

The two families residing in the house were those of Lawrence George, and Lewis George, the grandfather of Lawrence.

The fire was discovered about 12.45 by Lewis George when flames were seen in the laundry shed. It is believed that the blaze was due to an overheated bucket-a-day stove.

The flames spread rapidly and the five members of the Lawrence George family and the two of the Lewis George household had to flee in scanty attire. The entire house was gutted and the contents destroyed. There is no insurance.

Fire companies from Wycombe, Midway and Doylestown responded. They were somewhat delayed by the heavy fog.

BRISTOL MAN SEVERELY HURT AS CAR HITS POLE

Wm. H. Fawcett, Jr., Believed To Have Fallen Asleep At Wheel of Auto

FOUND HOURS LATER

A Bristol motorist, believed to have fallen asleep at the wheel of his automobile, is in a serious condition in Frankford Hospital.

The injured: William H. Fawcett, Jr., Main street, Bath Addition.

Fawcett was found in an unconscious condition on Frankford avenue, Philadelphia, Wednesday morning at five o'clock, by a post-man. He was found to be painfully injured, and was in an unconscious condition at the wheel of his car, which had struck a pole.

Fawcett, according to hospital officials, has concussion of the brain, possible fracture of the skull and jaw, two broken teeth, lacerations of the head and elbow. His condition today is reported as "a little better." X-ray pictures were taken at the hospital to determine the full extent of the injuries.

The Bristol man had left his home Tuesday evening to attend a lodge session in Philadelphia. Sometime after midnight, his wife became greatly alarmed at his failure to return home. It was not until morning that Fawcett was located in the Frankford Hospital. It is believed he lay in an unconscious condition in his machine for several hours.

Upon regaining consciousness for a few minutes the localite informed his questioners that he must have fallen asleep as he did not realize what had happened to him. The last he knew was that he was enroute to his home. The automobile is said to be considerably damaged.

HOLBERG SENTENCED IN BUTTER RACKET

Collector to Pay One-Third of Costs and Serve 11 Months to Two Years

GAVE STATE EVIDENCE

DOYLESTOWN, Dec. 11.—For service that he rendered the Commonwealth of Penna. when he turned State's evidence in the famous "watered butter racket" trial in the Bucks County criminal court this term Abraham E. Hofberg, 31, of West Oak Lane, the $40-a-week collector for the shake-down racket, escaped a maximum sentence of two years in prison yesterday, but was sentenced by Judge Calvin S. Boyer to pay one-third of the costs and serve a sentence of not less than 11 months nor more than two years in the Bucks County Prison.

Hofberg pleaded guilty to a charge of conspiracy to levy blackmail and extort $8000 from John Rosenberger, owner and proprietor of the Clear Spring Creamery, Appletonville for protection for placing excessive moisture in butter that was made at the creamery over a period of about seven months.

Two days ago, after deliberating but 10 minutes, a jury convicted two other defendants of the same charge. They are Joseph L. Schwartz, Pine street, near 7th, Philadelphia, former chief food agent of the Philadelphia district, and Morris Frank, South Water street, outter and egg merchant. Both have filed motions for a new trial and are now out on bail. The maximum they can receive under the law is two years in the County Prison or the Penitentiary, or a fine.

State Senator Clarence J. Buckman, of Langhorne represented Hofberg. Senator Buckman asked that sentence be suspended in Hofberg's case because of the assistance that he had given the Commonwealth.

Special Deputy Attorney General Ralph J. Rinalducci, of Montgomery county, who prosecuted the watered butter racketeers, was in court when Hofberg was sentenced.

"Hofberg has been of material assistance to the Commonwealth and I doubt very much whether we could

Discovery of Theft Made Upon Janitor's Arrival at 6.40 Today

STATE POLICE CALLED

Amount Stolen Approximates $100; Send for Philadelphia Detectives

CORNWELLS HEIGHTS, Dec. 11.—The safe in the office of Bensalem Township high school was "cracked" during the night, and a sum of money stolen.

Discovery of the theft was made when the janitor David Cherry, Bridge-water, reached the high school building this morning at 6.40.

The safe door was open, and papers, books, envelopes, etc., strewn upon the floor.

According to officers called in the case the loot was approximately $100. State police station at Doylestown was notified, and private H. S. Dando was sent to investigate.

Detectives from Philadelphia were summoned to the scene, as it is believed by officers that the job is one executed by professionals in their line.

The safe measures six feet in height and four feet in width. It is of cast iron.

According to the officer investigating a hole was drilled a few inches from the lock, and the charge set off. A raincoat was apparently placed on the drilled hole, as powder burns show on the coat which was left near the safe.

Cherry, upon making the discovery, notified school officials, who sent for the state police.

TWO MALE GROUPS ATTEND JOINT DINNER

Fathers' Association and Exchange Club Hear Interesting Speakers

EAT TURKEY DINNER

The annual Christmas dinner of the Fathers' Association of Bristol was observed last evening when 75 members of the Association and the Exchange Club were served in the high school cafeteria.

The guest speaker of the evening, Dr. Gordon, sent word to the group at the last minute that he was unable to attend. Paul Forster, president of the Fathers' Association, was in the chair during the course of the meeting.

Mr. Forster spoke briefly on the accomplishments of the Fathers' Association, and particularly praised the efforts that resulted in the new stands on the athletic field. He stressed the need for co-operation of the Association in completing this project and the carrying on of other projects.

Stanford K. Runyan and Doron Green both offered brief remarks at the meeting. Mr. Runyan, sponsor of the stand project, spoke briefly on this work, and Mr. Green dwelt on the proposed changes for the high school building which would give a more adequate and more sanitary setting in the high school building and in the gymnasium.

After the last minute communication from Mr. Gordon was received, James Farrell, guest speaker of the Exchange Club, addressed the group. The speaker, district representative of a pencil company, spoke on the processes of making pencils. Mr. Farrell also sketched a brief history of the pencil industry.

Following the dinner and the addresses, the group adjourned to the high school auditorium where they witnessed the play, "Growing Pains," given by the high school dramatic club.

TO GIVE BUT NOT TAKE

Pennsylvania's Mennonites will pay their social security taxes; but they won't take the old-age pensions. Here is why, as set forth in a letter from the Mennonite board of missions at Lancaster, Pa., to the Philadelphia office of the social security board:

"As a people, we have no objection in the least to giving the State an account as provided by law. But we have conscientious scruples in regard to receiving the benefits. It has always been customary for each congregation to care for its own poor, which is also scriptural, according to Matthew, xxvi., 11."

The verse cited from the Gospel according to St. Matthew reads: "For ye have the poor always with you; but Me ye have not always."

The social security board replied: "A person could refuse to accept the benefits accrued under the act if he or she had conscientious scruples against doing so."

It is hardly necessary to add, however, that the federal government would recognize no conscientious scruples against paying the tax. The Mennonites do not present that controversial issue, as they have evinced cheerful willingness to pay what the law requires. So this religious sect sets a precedent by refusing to accept something for something at a time when many organized secular groups look to the government for something for nothing.

SAVE THE CHILDREN

The National Safety Council's latest figures on traffic mortality, covering the 10 months ending with October, are particularly distressing because of the increased fatalities among child pedestrians.

The figures indicate the total 1936 mortality will be somewhat larger than in 1935 and, therefore, the largest in the country's history. However, this bad news is offset to some extent by the increase in driving this year over last. Thus it is indicated the death "per 10,000,000 gallons of gasoline" consumed will be actually below that of the prior year.

There is no escaping, however, the dread significance of the increased deaths reported among children five to 14 years of age. At the rate established in the first 10 months of the year a tenth more of these innocents will have been run down and killed or fatally injured than in 1935.

This increase can not be explained away in terms of increased traffic. Nor do more children run or play in the streets in good times than in bad. The mounting child mortality can be seen only as evidence that the teaching of traffic safety in the schools somehow has fallen down, nationally speaking, or has lost some of its effectiveness. Redoubled diligence in this invaluable teaching would seem to be the answer.

In a week, 10 women in Buffalo reported their cars stolen, when they had only forgotten where they had parked them. Yet they weep if you laugh at their "intuition."

We are sorry to have to report that one more noble experiment has failed, in Hollywood. Lily Damita is not a home girl.

These 1,000-page novels have taken the edge off the She-has-a-book gag.

LOVE'S LITANY by Hazel Livingston

CHAPTER XV

They went down in the elevator, passed the plum and gold doorman. "It's such a good address. If you only had one of the large, front apartments!"

"When I marry an heiress—" "When you marry Adele. Be specific."

They were getting into the car now. He was giving more than his usual attention to starting.

She watched him narrowly. "Donald, you haven't—you haven't seen anyone else?"

"Hundreds—thousands. We'd better go by the garage and get some more gas. I have a call or two to make afterwards, and—"

"Donald, you've fallen in love with someone else!" "She thought he turned a bit more ruddy. 'You're crazy!' he said shortly."

"You have! I can tell the way you deny it." "Nonsense. I don't know anybody. Adele's taken every bit of my time since June."

"Well—if you'll promise me—" "I'll promise you nothing," he said angrily. And then when her face fell, and she looked at him with reproachful, hurt eyes, he said:

"Oh, I'm sorry. Nerves. Upset over a kid I saw this afternoon. Forgive me, Eve. I'll be more human when I've had some food."

She laid her hand on his. "Of course. It's so unlike you to snap at me, that's all. Tell me about the kid. The little boy. Is he seriously ill?"

"Girl. I think she'll be all right now. I'm tired, that's all."

"Oh—a girl. A young girl. Donald, you're—don't get mad again, but you're not getting interested in some new girl? Darling, I'm sure Adele expects—and I've hoped so—"

"Oh, I'll marry Adele—if she'll have me. This is only a kid, as I said—a child. It's nothing, Eve, stop rubbing me the wrong way, will you?"

She smiled, leaned back in the car. "All right. That was all I wanted, dear—your promise."

Autumn passed, and winter, and spring came again.

Christie, who had been pale and listless all autumn, and listless and bored through the winter, bloomed again.

She thought it was because she was busy. Donald Latham had got her interested in a day nursery where working mothers left their babies. She worked like a slave, and loved it. Talked about it until even patient Aunt Nettie sighed and Adele refused to hear another word.

Isabelle tried it, too, for a little while, but soon gave it up. "I can't be tied down—must have freedom to express myself!" she said.

So Christie went alone every day and saw less and less of the family. And if she still cried herself to sleep occasionally no one knew or cared.

She told herself that she no longer loved Gene, that she had never loved him. That it was just a childish infatuation and a sickening, sad mistake.

But, though she could persuade herself that she was well out of it and never wanted to see him again, she couldn't forget him.

He haunted her. He taunted her in her sleep. He was so closely associated with all her dear memories of home and the dead Adolphus. When she thought of Spanish Pass she thought of the dusty red road and the old dairy, with big Pete Dubois in patched jeans and little Madame Dubois in her petticoats and shawls. She'd dream of a flower-dotted slope to the icy little creek where the watercress grew and the little brownish frogs lived on the rocks.

And then she'd see Gene, his dark head, his liquid black eyes, his flashing smile. For a little while she'd be happy and young again, and then she'd hear him saying:

"You must be crazy—we can't get married!" and her heart would be sick within her.

Sometimes she'd dream of the little restaurant in San Francisco where he told her about the other girl. Then she'd wake, cold and clammy with sweat, choked with shame and tears.

She never passed that corner in San Francisco without averting her eyes. It was spoiled for her forever.

Even Spanish Pass was spoiled. When she was ill and miserable in the Piedmont house in the early autumn and the first days of the winter, before Donald found the work for her, she used to think sometimes of going back.

She had her allowance. It was more than sufficient for her to live, with a housekeeper, or a chaperon of some sort, in the comfortable old house.

But what was there to go back to, with Dad gone and Gene worse

He was as attentive as ever. But there was a studied attentiveness about it that irritated her, frightened her. He was being sweet to her because he thought he ought to, because . . . because . . . She didn't know why, except that it was no longer because he wanted to.

He sent her little presents. Flowers. A book. A small box of some special candy. He was as sweet as ever, but something was lacking. He no longer enjoyed the time he spent with her, he no longer gave her his full attention.

She knew that he was worried about something, that his mind was constantly upon something or someone else.

It was months before she was positive that that someone was Christie.

The thing was ridiculous. A brilliant, sophisticated young surgeon than gone? Her best friend, Gladys Platt, had dropped her (poor Christie, she never knew that it was just like Gladys' hurt pride, thinking that she herself was dropped). And the others were only too ready to take Gladys' side and say, with her, that Christie Cooper was all right so long as she and old man Cooper just lived alone, but her head was turned when her Aunt Nettie and her society daughters came, and she was sent away to a ritzy school.

Often she'd slip in to talk to him while he was waiting for Adele.

Just how much Donald helped and how much she came to depend on him and his friendship she hardly knew.

Certainly she wasn't in love with him then. Nor did she dream of his being in love with her. He was Adele's friend. He and Adele went everywhere together.

Often she'd see Adele, in some new, lovely costume, starting out with him for an evening of dancing or theater going. Often, while he was waiting for Adele, she'd slip into the drawing room to talk to him.

She never knew how much more interested and happy he was with her. How he relaxed into a quiet, easy naturalness that was all too foreign to him these days. She just knew that he was the only person she could really talk to, and she looked for him with eagerness to tell him every little problem in connection with the nursery, every little joke, everything that interested her.

But Adele knew. She knew, and suffered.

It wasn't that he neglected her.

have gotten a conviction in this case without him," Rinalducci said to Judge Boyer. "Whatever leniency you may feel inclined to show will be perfectly satisfactory with the Commonwealth and the Department of Justice."

Senator Buckman then asked Mr. Rinalducci whether it would be satisfactory to the Commonwealth if the Court saw fit to suspend sentence in Holberg's case.

"I have nothing to say, it is entirely up to the Court; I will not object to anything," Mr. Rinalducci replied.

Judge Boyer then stated:

"We cannot see our way clear to suspend sentence in this case. In our opinion that would be going entirely too far, in spite of the fact that you have been of assistance to the Commonwealth. The Court cannot overlook the fact that this is an extremely serious offense, punishable with either a penitentiary or a prison sentence or a fine. The Court will take into consideration that you pleaded guilty and were of assistance to the Commonwealth. This is your second offense the records showing that you served time in New York City, and had it not been that you had pleaded guilty, the Court would have imposed the maximum sentence of two years. The Court must set an example and place its stamp of disapproval on a racket that started in Philadelphia and spread into the con-ties of Bucks County. The Court also takes into consideration that you did serve a month in the county prison after your arrest."

STUDIO EXPERT TELLS ABOUT $150 WARDROBE

Style Creator for Dixie Dunbar, Guides Co-Eds on College Apparel

TELLS HOW IT IS DONE

By Griffing Bancroft, Jr.
(I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)

HOLLYWOOD, Dec. 11.—(INS)—"To build down the cost of an excellent college wardrobe to $150 sounds like a real undertaking, but it can be done by spending forethought and energy."

This was the opinion today of Gwen Wakeling, 20th Century-Fox studio designer who created the wardrobes for Dixie Dunbar, Arline Judge, and Betty Grable, feminine principals in the college picture, "Pigskin Parade."

"Roughly speaking the bulk of this amount should go into clothes directly concerned with college activities—coats, skirts, sweaters, sturdy shoes, etc.," Miss Wakeling said.

"The wise girl will not attempt to skimp on these things, which she has to face as often as she looks in the mirror, in order to make a dazzling appearance at off-campus affairs."

"Aside from the personal satisfaction of a daily well-groomed appearance, campus clothes must be made to stand up under hard wear. And to do this, they have to be good."

"Cold climates make this part of the wardrobe much more costly than mild ones. A heavy coat is a necessity, and it's difficult to get a good all-purpose one for less than $40. My advice is to choose one without fur, neither definitely sports nor too dressy, and in the place of fur use well chosen scarfs for variety's sake."

"When so much of the budget has to go into a coat, the thing to do next is to fall back on the college classics—sweaters and skirts. Modern knitting mills turn out the former in colors and designs far superior to their cost, some as low as $4 or $4. Skirts with college needs in mind will supply smart tweed and flannel skirts for very little more."

"The two-piece dress, because it admits of interchange, is another blessing to the girl who counts her pennies. There are some bright little numbers in lovely shades of angora, and other lightweight wools that can be unearthed for as low as $15."

"When it comes to frocks for faculty teas and special excursions into town, there are models at around $16.50 that have an unmistakable air. These are best chosen in dark silks with a bright touch of color."

"Dear to the heart of every college maiden is the evening dress. If she has 'clothes sense' she will not try to appear sophisticated beyond her years, but she does yearn for something that will create an impression."

"One of the taffetas or moires, cut simply, will do the trick at around $22.50."

"Hats are a problem easily solved at college. One good hat for town expeditions will do, and for the rest of the time berets and knitted caps are sufficient. Five dollars on your head, if properly chosen, can be made to look like twice that much."

Stripped of Titles, Income, Edward Retires to Private Life

the royal commission—Lord Onslow and Lord Demman and the Earl of Stanhope.

In all the rush of parliamentary procedure which made Edward no longer

King, there was but one gleam of confidence for the only Monarch in Britain's history to abdicate voluntarily—the only one to renounce his throne and sceptre because otherwise he could not marry the woman he loves. This was announced by Sir Thomas Inskip, the attorney general, that Edward will be under no compulsion to go into exile, although he is reported to have promised his mother, Queen Mary, he will never again set foot on British soil.

"Can the attorney general state," asked Will Thorne, Laborite leader, M. P., "whether there is any truth in reports the King is being compelled to leave the country?"

"There is no truth whatever in the suggestion," Inskip replied.

His statement was acknowledged as meaning, "Mr. Windsor" is not bound to leave the country, and will not have to leave in permanent exile. But he is expected to depart tonight, after a broadcast message of farewell to his empire and to the world.

Parliamentary approval of Edward's abdication followed a formal routine, never used before under anything approaching similar circumstances, went through on well-oiled wheels.

LONDON, Dec. 11.—(INS)—Riding rough-shod over all opposition, the House of Commons today passed the bill confirming the abdication of King Edward through its second—the deciding—reading without a record vote.

By the crushing majority of 439 to 5, the House quickly settled the issue by voting down an amendment by Laborite James Maxton calling for a Republican form of government.

Parliament met at 11 a. m. to pass the abdication bill.

Crowds cheered Premier Baldwin and other leading members as they walked to the momentous meeting.

Before a packed house, Baldwin rose and moved the second reading of the bill—the crucial test of its progress through Parliament.

Members of the House warmly cheered outstanding personages on their arrival in the chamber. Baldwin's motion to give governmental business precedence and to suspend the 4 o'clock closing rule was passed by acclamation.

While a heavy-hearted Parliament went about the formal business of accepting the self-exile of King Edward, the dazed nation forced a welcoming cheer for his brother, the Duke of York, who unwillingly replaces him on the throne.

Then, shorn of his many and gorgeous titles, a certain "Mr. Windsor" is expected to broadcast his swan song to the empire tonight. Later today or tomorrow he is outward bound, free to marry Mrs. Simpson as soon as her divorce action is completed. For this he had renounced a great emperorship, no man could do more for a woman. No woman could expect more from a man.

Sorrow and affection, plus bitterness, were mingled confusedly in the public's reaction. They could not understand their able young monarch's closing his place in history with a chapter on love.

The Government's attitude that the Monarchy was greater than any individual was generally approved. Yet the people found it not easy to smash a former idol, even when convinced that his feet were of clay.

Meeting again for the second act of the drama in what Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin called "a theatre which is being watched by the whole world," the House of Commons was organized along sternly disciplined political lines to jam through the bill legalizing Edward's abdication.

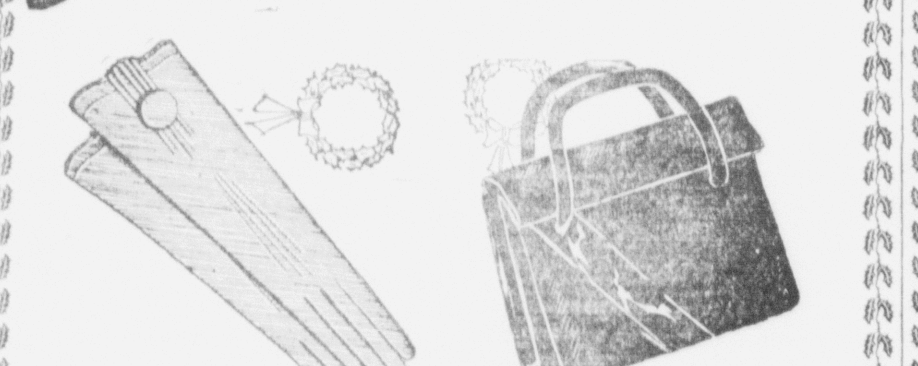

The measure provides:

- 1—"Demise of the crown" and succession of the Duke of York.
- 2—"That neither Edward nor his descendants shall have any right to the throne."
- 3—"That Edward shall not have to ask the new king's permission to marry."

Only one hitch stood in the way of its speedy enactment and the commencement of the ceremonial pomp that will herald George VI as King.

Fiery James Maxton, Socialist, has offered an amendment to the bill calling for a "Republican form of government," but the Government's parliamentary machine is expected to squelch him in short order.

REV. NORMAN DAVIDSON PORTRAYS GRANDFATHER

Has Important Role in "The First Commandment"
To Be Staged Here

HUNDREDS EXPECTED

Another important character in "The First Commandment" to be staged in Bristol M. E. Church, Monday and Tuesday, is the Rev. Norman L. Davidson, pastor of Bristol M. E. Church, playing the part of the grandfather, who carries the first scene of the production and makes a number of very important announcements concerning the entire "First Commandment." He is supported in these particular scenes by Joseph Macquire, playing the part of the father; Marian Walters, playing the part of the mother, and Vida Neahall and Sterling Davidson, playing the parts of two grandchildren. The Rev. Davidson, well known in this community, is a man who is particularly fitted to carry the part of the interpreter and announcer, and the grandfather character.

There have been a great many amateur productions and community shows staged in Bristol, but there have been few of the magnitude of "The First Commandment." Never has there been anything staged that can be compared with it, because it is done in an entirely different way, and in an entirely different manner from anything that has ever been staged.

FASHION PARADE

By Orry-Kelly
(Famous Hollywood Stylist Working For International News Service)
HOLLYWOOD — (INS) — Good taste in dress is a point aside from the pocketbook. That may be trite, but the reason we are risking our reputation in voicing an oft-told story is because the proof of it has never been more definitely shown than in a picture designed some very striking gowns.

The picture is "Her Husband's Secretary" in which Jean Muir plays the role of the rich man's wife and Beverly Roberts is his secretary. Jean's role, of course, calls for expensive clothes while Beverly's must be within the reach of a working girl. Both have wardrobes in the epitome of good taste and yet they come within completely different price ranges.

Beverly Roberts has two business suits in the picture. One of them is a clever imitation of a man's formal morning suit. The skirt is the conventional dark stripe and the jacket is Oxford grey made in cutaway style with a short swallow tail in back and satin lapels. The blouse is white crepe and she wears an ascot tie with it. Her other suit is green wool with a slightly flared and belted short jacket. The flared collar is of black Persian lamb and the tailored blouse is black silk jersey. Both of these suits are expensive enough to grace any working girl's wardrobe because they rely on good material and newness of line for their smartness rather than on luxurious furs.

Jean Muir has two street costumes in the picture which parallel in the more elaborate way, Beverly's work clothes. One of Jean's suits consists of a grey wool dress with short sleeves which is topped by a bolero with long, slim sleeves. It is luxuriously bordered in silver fox, so that the expensive fur gracefully frames the face. Another dress of Jean's is of golden crepe roma which is draped from the high neckline secured with turquoise and silver clips. The slim dress is worn with a full-length mink coat. It all reflects simple elegance. Nothing is overdone as is sometimes the temptation when money is no object in dressing. However in this picture, the wardrobe of the business girl and the wealthy wife, tie for honors in good taste.

to fulfill the will made in 1926 by Mme. Thors, a widow, who left her large residence at Louveciennes, Seine Oise, as a place of rest for eminent men in retreat.

YOUTH TURNS PIRATE

AMOY, China—(INS)—"I joined the pirates because my mother was sick, and I had to have money to buy medicine," declared a 22-year-old Chinese villager when captured near Amoy after the piracy of the steam-launch Soonen off the Fukien coast. When arrested, the youth, who is exceptionally big and powerful, snapped his handcuffs as if they had been thread, but he made no attempt to escape.

GENERAL REVIEW OF NEWS IN NOVEMBER

By International News Service

Re-election of President Roosevelt in smashing victory overshadowed all other news in a month replete with spectacular front-page developments. While New Deal voters were machine-gunning the Republican hopes of victory, Spanish rebels were bombing Madrid, the roar of foreign-made shells threatening to bring repercussions throughout the continent and Asia. Fascist Italy and Nazi Germany recognized the insurgents. Emboldened, Gen. Francisco Franco, rebel leader, warned world governments their shipping entered the loyalist port of Barcelona at its peril.

There were warlike echoes elsewhere. Germany and Japan reported a pact to fight the spread of Communism, and Russia, seeing herself surrounded, grew challenging.

The Nazis rattled their sabers as the Soviets condemned to a firing squad a German charged with implication in a mine sabotage plot. A crisis was averted when this sentence was reduced to ten years imprisonment.

Japan and China squared off again, as clashes were reported on the Manchukuo and Mongolian frontiers.

But an aura of peace hung over the Americas, as preparations grew apace for the Buenos Aires conference. President Roosevelt sailed amid cheers to participate.

There was no peace, however, on the American labor front. The American Federation, in annual convention, failed to patch up its quarrel with the CIO, and the shipping strike hit the west and east coasts, and the Gulf ports.

Union rows and strikes did not disturb American business men and industrialists. The stock market gained. There were record stock dividends and wage bonuses, running into the hundreds of millions. Flour was cut and wages raised and business leaders prepared to meet on plans to return 4,000,000 employable to private pay-rolls. The United States Chamber of Commerce saw business gaining, with "spectacular bursts here and there." But through it all Americans kept a weather eye on Buckingham Palace, enthralled with the romance of King Edward VIII, ruler of Great Britain and Emperor of India, and Mrs. Wallis Warfield Simpson, of Baltimore.

THE PRESIDENTIAL ELECTION concluded the most heated campaign in many decades, but, from the time the first ballots were counted, there was never a doubt as to the result. Governor Alfred M. Landon, the smiling, likable Republican nominee, carried only Maine and Vermont.

That was not the only bitter pill for the G. O. P. to swallow. The Democrats increased their already swollen majorities in the Senate and House, and swept many normally Republican states. Twenty-six of thirty-three Democratic gubernatorial candidates won, including Governor Herbert H. Lehman, sponsor of New York's "Little New Deal."

Postmaster General James A. Farley, who had forecast the result on the dot, sailed for a vacation in Ireland—and there he kissed the Blarney Stone.

Falling to poll a legally sufficient vote, the Communists lost their place on the ballot in future elections in New York and other states.

LABOR WAS SATISFIED WITH the vote polled under its new emblem, and prepared increased activities at the next election. It could not agree, however, on the issue of how organization of the mass production industries was to be carried out. There were indications the schism would grow wider, as the A. F. of L. boycotted the clothing workers' products and declared the shipping strike "outlaw."

WASHINGTON SUFFERED A

shock when Dr. Rexford Guy Tugwell, Undersecretary of Agriculture and chief target of administration critics, resigned. He becomes an executive of the American Molasses Co., of Wall Street, from whence much of the cannonading against him originated during the political campaign.

The capital forecast Supreme Court endorsement of the administration's social security legislation after the high court, 4 to 4, placed its seal of approval on New York's job insurance law.

WPA Administrator Harry L. Hopkins announced the October relief load declined 28 per cent from the peak of 5,316,000 cases in January 1935.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT URGED a limit on foreign buying of U. S. securities, it being reported issues totaling $700,000,000 were held abroad. The President also enunciated a policy which would prevent foreign nations buying fighting planes, in which military secrets might be included, from getting delivery for two years. Mr. Roosevelt announced appointment of Charles Edison, son of the inventor, as assistant secretary of the navy, succeeding Henry L. Roosevelt, who died last February.

The United States conference of Mayors met in the capital, urging congress to appropriate sufficient funds to keep the work relief program in effect until June 30.

It was announced there would be no new federal taxes.

Secretary of Agriculture Henry Wallace was named head of a committee to report back on February 1st on the "most promising ways of alleviating the shortcomings of the farm tenancy problem."

THROUGHOUT THE NATION during the month it was significant there was no major crime, but there were many other topics to hold interest. The new $77,000,000 San Francisco-Oakland bridge was opened for traffic.

Announcement was made of the en-agement of Miss Ethel DuPont, 21, of the famous Delaware family, to Franklin D. Roosevelt, Jr. Mary Pickford and Charles "Buddy" Rogers confirmed their frequently rumored troth. The gross cash income of the nation's farmers was placed at $7,850,000,000, and it was estimated they have eleven per cent more home improvements and luxuries than a year ago. More people were buying automobiles after the annual shows throughout the country.

Factory construction was reported by George A. Bryant, Jr., Cleveland industrial engineer, as running eighty per cent ahead of last year. Burleigh Grimes, former pitcher, was named manager of the Brooklyn Dodgers, to succeed Casey Stengel. A committee started out to sell $35,000,000 in bonds to finance New York's World Fair. The American Women's Association awarded its sixth annual gold medal for eminent achievement to Dean Virginia C. Gildersleeve of Barnard College. Mayor La Guardia planned a miniature G-man bureau for New York City. Cardinal Pacelli, Papal Secretary of State, arrived for a tour of the country. Republican National Chairman John D. M. Ham'lton announced he saw no need of a fundamental change in the G. O. P. political creed. The Rev. Charles E. Coughlin, Detroit radio priest, announced the election returns had discredited his National Union for Social Justice and withdrew from the air waves. Mrs. Gloria Morgan Vanderbilt started a new legal battle to regain custody of her daughter, Gloria, 12, from Mrs. Gertrude Vanderbilt Whitney. The nation had its first real cold spell of the winter. The first social security forms were distributed. A South Bend plant experienced the first "sit-down" strike in recent years. And Mayor M. G. Tamm of Tacoma, after making his eighth hole-in-one in 11 years, said the glory was not all golfers had cracked it "up to be. He had to entertain lavishly after each ace, and the cost was getting too much.

IN THE WORLD EYES REMAINED focused on Spain, with the loyalists cause uncertain. Madrid claimed its warships had been attacked by "foreign submarines." It was hinted strongly the leftists were getting new equipment from the Soviet, while Italy and Germany, after recognition of the nationalists, were accused anew of aiding the rebel cause. An unexpectedly strong defense was being made of the capital, where the United States because of the repeated bombings, closed its embassy.

France was in turmoil following the suicide of Minister of the Interior Roger Salengro, found dead in his gas-filled rooms at Lille, where he was mayor. A newspaper had falsely accused him of deserting under fire in the World War. Huge demonstrations marked his funeral where Premier Leon Blum announced sponsorship of new laws to curb calumny.

France was reported seeking new negotiations with the United States to write down the war debt.

Eugene O'Neill, famous American playwright, was awarded the Nobel prize for literature, worth $45,000. Prof. Carl David Anderson of the California Institute of Technology and Prof. V. G. Hess of Innsbruck University, Austria, shared the Physics prize. The chemistry prize went to Prof. Debye of the Kaiser Wilhelm Institute for Physics in Berlin.

An estimated 1,200 persons were killed by a flood in the sulphur mining district of Akita Prefecture, northern Japan.

In a remarkable operation, 28-year-old Simplicia Godino was severed from his Siamese twin brother, who died of pneumonia. Simplicia was expected to survive.

Rumania heard reports King Carol was planning to exile his mother, Dowager Queen Marie. Austria and Hungary tacitly recognized Italian conquest of Ethiopia. Germany admitted it was building aircraft carriers. King Edward reviewed the Home Fleet and inspected the South Wales mining area, expressing horror at conditions in the latter. The League of Nations announced 1,700,000 more men are permanently under arms now than in 1913.

GERMANY'S NAVY MATCHES LAND FORCES

Three Battleships and Aircraft Carrier Will Be Added in 1937

IS GROWING RAPIDLY

By Pierre J. Huss
(I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)
BERLIN, Dec. 11—(INS)—German seapower today is growing rapidly toward its ultimate goal of matching in defensive ability the vaunted strength of the Third Reich's land forces.

While ready to sign on the one hand naval treaties such as the recent one humanizing submarine warfare and the revised Anglo-German naval document, German naval engineers on the other hand are rapidly justifying their ingenuity in producing the latest in warships and equipment. They hope once more to astound the world with naval construction feats as they did with the 10,000-ton vest-pocket battleships.

For that reason, the naval world is watching with deepest interest the fruits of German engineering skill to be available during 1937 in three new types of warships hitherto not possessed by the new German navy: One 35,000-ton battleship, one 19,250-ton aircraft carrier and two 25,000-ton battleships.

All will carry the latest in naval artillery, although the exact type and size in some cases remains undetermined for the time being and will be subject to an agreement yet to be reached as part of the revised Anglo-German naval treaty.

The signing of the latter in revised form to conform to the London naval treaty has been held up by an argument on gun calibres between Germany and Soviet Russia. On the British Admiralty's desk at present lies Germany's 20,000-word technical argument as to why certain gun calibres and ranges must be allowed her in view of Soviet naval privileges, and until that controversy is settled, the Anglo-German naval annex will not be signed.

The official naval manual just published revealed that the 1935 building program has been increased to 53 warships as follows:

One 35,000-ton battleship; one 19,250-ton aircraft carrier; three 10,000-ton cruisers; six 1,811-ton destroyers; twelve 600-ton torpedo boats; ten 500-ton submarines; four 250-ton submarines; fifteen mine-sweepers; one 26,000-ton battleship to be completed.

Except for the gun categories as yet to be decided by the Anglo-German naval annex, the battleships will carry nine 11-inch and twelve 5.9-inch guns and the cruisers 7.8-inch guns. The destroyers carry 5-inch guns and eight torpedo tubes, while the 500-ton submarines are equipped with 3.5-inch guns with five torpedo tubes and a machine-gun.

There are ten of the latter in the water now and 24 "subs" of 250 tons each with three torpedo tubes and a machine-gun. The two 750-ton "subs" already launched will carry 4-inch guns and six torpedo tubes. Their speed is 13 knots on the surface and seven submerged.

The aircraft carriers, one of which may come to 23,000 tons, will excel in the latest catapulting device and facilities to shoot their planes off as rapidly as possible and let them operate under all sorts of sea weather. Much interest has been roused in foreign naval circles here by the construction of such carriers by Germany, as it is pointed out that such types of ships are adapted chiefly to service far away from home shores for the protection of home interests abroad.

RECIPES

Lunch Box Special

In line with holiday sweets, what could be more wholesome and delicious than dates stuffed with nut meats, or stuffed prunes in the youngster's lunch box.

A quantity of the prunes or dates can be prepared in advance, and they are far more sensible than cakes for boys and girls.

Fillings for stuffed prunes may be: Marshmallows, quartered lengthwise; peanut butter, cream cheese, plain or reinforced with chopped nuts or candied ginger; fondant, plain or reinforced with finely chopped nuts, raisins, or chopped candied cherries.

If the children like preserved ginger, make a filling of one-third cup finely-chopped preserved ginger and one-third cup finely-chopped nut meats for 24 prunes.

Buy the large prunes for stuffing and simmer them 15 minutes in water to cover. Make a slit in one side, remove pits and when cold stuff cavities with chosen filling. They may be rolled in granulated sugar.

Another holiday or lunch-box sweet, which is guaranteed not to pile up future trouble for parents, is stuffed or non-stuffed apricots. Steam dried apricots, or simmer them in water just to cover for 10 minutes, draining very thoroughly if simmered. Pat dry, press a blanched Brazil-nut into each apricot and draw fruit partly together over the nut. Roll in granulated sugar. Dates, of course, require no cooking.

Pop Corn Recipes

Pop-corn, salted, buttered, or mixed with molasses, is a wholesome, inexpensive confection. Delicious Maple Corn Balls are made thus:

Three quarts popped corn, one cup maple syrup, one-half cup sugar, one tablespoon shortening, one-half teaspoon salt. Pop the corn and pick over, discarding hard kernels, and put in a large kettle. Melt shortening in saucepan, add syrup and sugar. Bring to the boiling point and let boil until mixture will become brittle when tried in cold water.

Pour mixture gradually, while stirring constantly, over corn which has been sprinkled with salt. Shape into balls, using as little pressure as possible.

Much water is lost during the popping of the corn, and so it contains more nutriment than does corn meal, or any of the corn breakfast foods on the market, its fuel value being 1,850 calories per pound. Freshly popped corn is so very dry and porous that its flavor and texture deteriorate rapidly if it is kept very long after popping, because of the absorption of moisture from the air. It is as easily and thoroughly digested as other kinds of cereal foods.

Pop-corn cake may be moulded in the form of soldiers, cannon or picturesque little figures.

Another dependable and much larger recipe for the popcorn balls, in which the process is identical with number one, calls for: Two cups granulated sugar, one cup brown sugar, three-fourths cup corn syrup, one cup water, one tablespoon shortening and five quarts popcorn. One cup of peanuts may be included in either recipe.

Before the days of corn syrup, the favorite method for crisp popcorn balls was to boil two cups sugar, one-half cup hot water and four tablespoons vinegar for 15 minutes, removing from the fire to add one tablespoon shortening, and pour over four quarts popped corn. This quantity will make about 20 good-sized popcorn balls.

Cream Fondant

There are many variations for fondant, and one recommendation for using it is that it may be prepared far in advance. In fact, this recipe is improved by packing it in a bowl and allowing it to season for at least two days before using. It will keep for several weeks.

Bitter cold weather is just the time for making fondant, that is, it never should be attempted on a muggy or three damp day. It should not be stirred after the sugar is melted, and the final beating must be administered when it is just cool, not hot and not cold. If fondant is beaten when it is too hot, it will leave your candy grainy.

Two cups sugar, one cup heavy cream, one tablespoon light corn syrup, pinch salt.

Place all the ingredients in a pan and cook over a slow fire until the sugar is dissolved. Then continue cooking until it forms a soft ball when tested in cold water, 234 to 240 degrees F. Pour on a wet platter or marble slab, sprinkle with cool water to help it cool, but do not move platter while it is cooling.

When lukewarm, commence working candy to the center of the platter, using a spatula with a forward and backward motion. When the mass is creamy white, it can be taken up in the hands and kneaded. Place in a bowl to season.

Mushroom Soup

When you are serving mushroom caps to stretch that left-over chicken, or when treating the family to broiled mushrooms, save the stems and simmer with seasonings, celery leaves, parsley and one slice of onion. If you have one cup of chicken stock, you can be assured of a delicious soup. Strain, add cream and a generous tablespoon of butter, and thicken slightly with flour. Of course, blending the butter and flour first is the more satisfactory method.

For a richer mushroom soup, melt two tablespoons of butter, cook a chopped onion in it. Chop two cups of mushrooms fine and add, cooking for five minutes. Sprinkle with the damp day. It should not be stirred after the sugar is melted, and the final beating must be administered when it is just cool, not hot and not cold. If tire has boiled one minute, the delicate flavor of mushroom soup can be easily lost by over-cooking. It is one of the rare exceptions to the long-cooking rule for soups.

NEWPORTVILLE

The annual bazaar of Newportville Church will be held on Saturday evening in Newportville Church basement. Many useful gifts will be on sale, also candy, cake and pies. At eight o'clock a comedy sketch will be presented, entitled "Our Aunt From California." The cast includes: Mrs. Charles Everett, Mrs. Raymond Given, Mrs. Clifford Ingraham, Mrs. William Greenwood, Miss Lillian Cameron and Mrs. George Erny. Another novelty has been planned in the form of a kitchen band. Mrs. George Erny is leader. A silver offering is to be received.

ANDALUSIA A FAVORITE IN 'RECS' CONTEST

Joe Diamanti's Andalusians in Green Wave will take the field at six o'clock over the Bristol Recreation eleven in an eleven-a-side football match on Sunday in the closing game of the Bristol gridiron season.

Diamanti's proteges have won nine, lost two, and deadlocked one. The clash was with the St. Ann's team last Sunday in a tilt played throughout a downpour of rain. North Phillips and Reno were the clubs that succeeded in beating the city line boys. The Andalusians boast of a winning streak of eight straight games.

The Recreation eleven was late in getting started this season and to date has won three, deadlocked two, and been beaten once. Mayfair handed them the beating while the St. Ann's eleven played them to a 7-7 tie.

The Recs have a strong backfield ace in "Henny" Mellor, the Fergusonville wildcat. It was Mellor's consistent line-ploughing which aided the Recs to score on the St. Ann's team and he was responsible for several of their first downs. The Recs have a fine field general in "Gige" Dougherty, who also coaches the club.

Matched with Mellor, the Andalusia club will have "Whitey" Schwartz. Schwartz played the best against the St. Ann's team last Sunday, as did Lange, another back. The Recreation aggregation must watch these two players if they have intentions of winning the game.

Indications point to the largest crowd of the season witnessing the clubs play, as it will test their strength in the 1937 Bucks County football league.

PREFER CLEAN FILMS

SYDNEY, Australia — (INS) — Australian women prefer "clean" films to "spicy" ones. This opinion was expressed by the President of the Good Film League, Mrs. Glencross, commenting on a statement from London that women stay away from cinemas unless something "spicy" is on. "Women do not like to see anything objectionable," she declared. "Distributors and exhibitors have told me that clean films are the best box-office attractions."

Celebrated Centers of 1936

By BURNLEY

That the center is the keystone of a football team's line is an obvious fact, and it should be equally obvious that no eleven can approach greatness without a high-class pivot in the center of the forward wall.

With the balance of football power more equally divided this year than ever before, it is not surprising that the 1936 season produced a bumper crop of phenomenal pivots.

Two of the best were Herwig and Hauze. Bob Herwig, a straw-thatched giant, was an Homeric figure even in California's distressing early season showings, and he was probably the most important factor in the Golden Bear's great closing rush.

Red Jim Hauze, Penn's stormy center, was the real leader of the Quaker's 1936 return to the top. Erratic, but with flashes of inspired greatness, Hauze showed a tendency to let down at times in 1935, but during the season just past, this strawberry blond was dynamic and devastating for sixty minutes of every game.

Listing some of the other leading centers of 1936, we find high-class snapper-backs exceedingly numerous.

In Dixieland, they point out Louisiana State's Stewart, Auburn's Gilbert and Kentucky's Myers as All-American pivots. Wojciehowicz of Fordham, Ray of Dartmouth, Basrak of Duquesne, Bell of Purdue, Smith of Washington State and Chavoar of U. C. L. A. are only a few of the other "centers of attention."

I began to really like BEER when I met SUNSHINE

"I used to hear men say they preferred beer's flavor to champagne's, but I had to find Sunshine before I found the taste they raved about."

"It's there in Sunshine. Cool, dry, faintly happy, and satisfying! It touches a pleasure-spot that nothing else in the world can reach. And Sunshine that good beer has a healthful food-value."

WATCH AUTO TRAFFIC DURING LATE AFTERNOON

DANGER at DUSK

Watch Out!

The twilight hour—that period just before dusk when motorists are hurrying homeward and many have failed to turn on the lights of the car—offers added hazards to children ending an afternoon at play or trudging home from late classes. W. L. Robinson, Safety Director of the Automobile Club of Philadelphia A. A. A., said in explaining the new A. A. A. school safety poster sent to schools.

The poster is in color and depicts two youngsters about to cross the street as a truck, without lights, emerges from around a corner. "Danger at dusk—Watch Out!" is the message that is carried to children and will be kept constantly before their eyes.

The A. A. A. club executive said that the twilight hour is a "danger period" on the highways and appealed to motorists to use added caution at this period.

"Through this poster and the series of safety lessons in the schools," he continued, "we hope to impress youngsters with the necessity for caution at dusk. However, this does not lessen the responsibility of motorists to protect children by exercising all possible care and caution."

BEER CONSUMPTION UP

BERLIN—(INS)—Reduction of unemployment in Germany has found in impressive reflection in beer production and consumption. According to the latest official statistics, beer consumption has increased from 518,709,000 gallons in 1934-35 to 583,400,000 gallons in 1935-36.
